LIFE. Some Reasons Why.

So. 1. The reasons why every citizen who has the wellfare of our common country at heart, should not vote the Democratic ticket in November, are numerous and very

1. The "solid South" will govern the North, if, with the help of northern Democtats, it gets possession of the government. The south has sent its hosts of rebel generals and colonels to Congress, who boast of their treason, and declare their hopes of revenge. And the nominees of the Democratic party, whom northern Democrals want to send to Congress to work with the conthern robels, present a long list of d shonored names-names foul with treason. The rebel Democrats, North and South, are not trustworthy; we cannot for the Reception of the Army of the trust the government to them without danger. And every northern Democratic vote is a help to these southern traitors. A loyal man, therefore, cannot vote the demo-

2. The "solid South" is a very dangerous solid for a Republican government .-The South is not divided from the North on political questions of mutual interest; but it is one section arraying itself against another section, in hostile attitude. With all these clogs, well as some of our ablest clergymen pargerons one for northern men to encourage n the South, for if carried much farther, it will certainly rekindle the camp fires of the army of Liberty.

3. The "solid South" is solid on ideas that are destructive to a republican form of government. The South is solid against a free press; against free speech; against free schools, and against free labor. Bu these are the very foundations of a repulwhich it must ever draw its life and power. But it is hopeless, nay, it is absurd, to look for civil service referm, from a party allied with the "solid South," whose chief nominee winked at Tweedis shameful robberies; who from his own mouth or pen has not uttered one honesty brought against him. The party itself, makes no pretension to civil service vice reform, and votes for the party who originated and have closely followed the motte, "To the victors belong the spoils," 8.
